EPPS'S COCOA BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocca. Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See Article in the Civil Service Gazette.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27. A Tour to Oregon and British

[ BY THE REV. ALEXANDER MACKINTOSH.] (Continued from our last issue)

THE climate in Summer and Autumn is delightful: it is really hot even to an inhabitant of the tropical regions. On some days the ther-mometer rises to 94° in the shade; but this takes place very seldom. The people residing in Portland think 70° Farenheit very warm, and were surprised at my racing-as they called my walking pace-and at my feeling cool at midday. In the Winter the weather-I am toldis cold, with frost and snow; but not at all severe. When the snow melts in the Spring and Summer, the city is often flooded. Traces now exist of the great flood in 1876. Business men at that time went to their offices in boats, and boats penetrated even into the stores. Heavy stones were let down on to the wooden pavements to keep the streets from floating, and in some streets platforms were raised above the water, so that all traffic should not cease. One can imagine how singular it must have appeared to the residents to have streets above streets, and water flowing below. Most of the streets which were covered with water at that time are fast rotting away, and the decayed matter is thought by many to be the cause of the malarious diseases which prevail to a great extent in Portland. However the authorities are fast repairing the streets, and there is much agitation about proper drainage for the whole city. It may be a suitable opportunity to say here that the odours proceeding from vegetable matter in Honolulu are very similar to those producing malaria in Portland. One cannot be surprised if in a short time fever and ague appear in Honolulu, as long as no steps are taken to avoid or remove the unhealthy and disagreeable effluvia which trouble not only people who live near the foot of Nuu-anu valley and elsewhere, but also those who pass by.

Portland altogether is a prosperous and thriving city. Every one seems to be busy, and it is a common saying that no one need starve in that locality if he is willing to work. Still it is not an unfrequent thing to see men of good family working as labouring hands, on railways, loading ships, splitting rails for fences, driving carts, or picking up any odd job which falls in their way for a living. These are generally those who have gone out into that part of the country thinking that they would soon make a fortune and that without much difficulty. They are not long there, before they find out their mistake, and no where is there a more perfect exemplification of the saying in Holy Writ-" If a man work not neither shall he eat"-and also -" He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread, but he that followeth after vain persons shall have poverty enough "(Prov. XXVIII-19) -than in Oregon. Travelling in a river boat up the Willamette River, towards Portland, one sees several small villages which seem to be fast decaying. These have been on paper flourishing towns, all beautifully marked out. The sites of public buildings, which never existed, are still pointed out to the traveller. Thousands of dollars have been invested by people living in Great Britain and in the Eastern States, in these paper cities, all of which were designed to rival Portland; but all that remains of them for their money is the hill-side covered with trees charred and blighted, a few dilapidated houses and some dangerous wooden streets. The "vain persons" have brought poverty upon many. In the interior of Oregon the land, when cleared of wood, is wonderfully rich-in some instances one hundred bushels of wheat have been gathered from one acre. It is fearfully laborious work to clear the ground of treesgrubbing—as it is called. Chinamen are largely employed in this work. The merchants of Portland expect to load with wheat, and dispatch this year to Great Britain, forty ships—each containing on an average about twelve hundred

Another principal industry of Portland is the salmon fishing. This of course includes the whole country on both banks of the River Columbia. The actual fishing stretches out to sea, over the Bar about nine or ten miles from the mouth of the river. Innumerable boats, strongly built and manned by two men, are scattered all over the river. In each boat is a net which is worth from three to four hundred dollars. The boats cost about the same amount of money Many men own their boats and nets, and fish on their own account. In other cases companies furnish both, and pay the fishermen so much a head for every fish they catch. In the first part of the season, the fish are worth twenty-five cents each, but towards the latter, the fishermen exact a dollar and often a dollar and a half. The immense success of the past few years has induced too many to enter into the cannery speculation, and the result is, that not a few have closed up for considerable amounts. A cannery—that is, the establishment where the salmon are boiled down and put in cans ready for exportation—in full blast is a busy place. Besides the fishermen, men are employed to attend to the boilers, cut up the fish and clean them; others again label and then pack the cans in boxes. Then the tin shop is a remarkable sight. Round benches in an upper story stand Chinamen, with all the tools for can making. The tin, of which the cans are made, comes in sheets measuring eighteen inches by twelve; from each sheet the sides of two cans are formed—the rest is all waste. In one Astorian cannery, fifteen thou-sand cans—each containing one pound of salmon —are filled daily. This cannery owns twenty-eight boats—each employing two men. The nets alone cost thirteen thousand dollars. Other branches of industry are not wanting in Portland. The Willamette Iron Works is not so extensive as the Honolulu Iron Works, but it seems to be in a flourishing condition. There are three other Foundries in Portland. Ship and river boat building is carried on. They launched the largest river boat, to ply on the Willamette and Columbia Rivers, the other day. It measures 220 feet in length, and registered at 1500 tons—irrespective of passenger accomodation— and it will perform the journey from Portland to Astoria and back in twenty-four hours. The distance from Portland to Astoria is 105 miles.

towards the further development of the home resources, but trust too much to importation. Every one allows that both Oregon and Washington Territory abound in minerals—gold, silver, lead, coal and iron—but owing to the lack of enterprise on the part of the large capitalists, these minerals are not worked. They say, it would cost private individuals more than they could get, to attempt mining-so at present, mining is left alone. (To be continued.)
